USDA Rural Development Mission

To increase the economic opportunity and improve the quality of life for all rural Americans

Introduction:

Increasing economic opportunity and improving the quality of life for people in rural America is the goal of the U.S. Department of Agriculture's (USDA) Rural Development mission area. USDA believes rural Americans deserve the same services enjoyed by people in suburban and urban areas while retaining the advantages of small town living.

USDA is working to eliminate substandard housing in rural America by helping rural residents buy, build or rent decent housing. It also creates jobs by funding the growth and creation of rural businesses and cooperatives.

USDA Programs help rural communities build and improve community facilities, such as schools, health clinics and fire stations. USDA also has programs that help rural communities build or extend utilities, including water, electricity and telecommunications services.

Program assistance is provided through direct or guaranteed loans and grants, technical assistance, research and educational materials and is administered through three Program areas: 1) Rural Housing Programs, 2) Rural Business and Cooperative Programs and 3) Rural Utilities Programs.

To accomplish its mission, USDA Rural Development often works in partnership with state, local and tribal governments, as well as rural businesses, cooperatives and non-profit agencies.

This handbook is to provide you with information concerning how to access and effectively use the services provided by Wisconsin USDA Rural Development. These services are intended to aid rural communities of Wisconsin to improve to their quality of life.

We hope you, as our valued customer, are able to benefit from the information provided in this guide. We invite you to contact our State office or any local office with questions you may have, and find out how you can benefit from our services.

Rural Development's Vision:

Rural Electrification Loans and Grants

Reliable, affordable electricity is essential to rural Americans for their economic well-being and quality of life. The USDA Rural Development electric program provides leadership and capital to upgrade, expand, maintain, and replace America's vast rural electric infrastructure. Under the authority of the Rural Electrification Act of 1936, USDA makes direct loans and loan guarantees to electric utilities to serve customers in rural areas.

The Electric Program makes loans and loan guarantees to finance the construction of electric distribution, transmission and generation facilities -- including system improvements and replacements required to furnish and import electric service in rural areas -- and for demand-side management, energy conservation programs, and on- and off-grid renewable energy systems.

USDA Rural Development makes loans to corporations, states, territories and subdivisions, and agencies such as municipalities, people's utility districts, and cooperative, nonprofit, limited-dividend, or mutual associations that provide retail electric service to rural areas or supply the power needs of distribution borrowers in rural areas. USDA Rural Development also provides financial assistance to rural communities with extremely high energy costs to acquire, construct, extend, upgrade, and otherwise improve energy generation, transmission, or distribution facilities. USDA Rural Development services approximately 700 active electric borrowers in 47 states.

Most USDA financed systems have a two-tiered organizational structure. Retail consumers are members of the distribution cooperative that provides electricity directly to their homes and businesses. Most distribution cooperatives, in turn, are members of power supply cooperatives, also called "generation and transmission" or "G&T" cooperatives, which generate and/or procure electricity and transmit it to the distribution member systems.

Direct and Guaranteed Loans and Grants

The USDA Rural Development Electric Program offers the following sources of financing assistance: Hardship Loans, Municipal Rate Loans, Treasury Rate Loans, Guaranteed Loans, and Assistance to Rural Communities with Extremely High Energy Costs (loans and grant assistance). The primary differences between the programs are the qualifying criteria and the interest rate for each type of financing.

Assistance to Rural Communities with Extremely High Energy Costs

provides grants and loans to be used to acquire, construct, extend, upgrade, and otherwise improve energy generation, transmission, or distribution facilities serving communities in which the average residential energy expenditure for home energy is at least 275 percent of the national average. Eligible entities are persons, State and local governments, and federally recognized Indian tribes and tribal entities.

Renewable Energy Projects, including renewable energy systems, such as solar, wind, hydropower, biomass, or geothermal, can be financed through Guaranteed Loans.
